THE NEW-ENGLAND FAMILY NEWS.
THE SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN FOR 1852.
DAILY, TWICE-DAILY, AND WEEKLY.
The Springfield (Mass.) Republican may not hesitate to claim position as the Standard & most interesting of New-England Journals. In the scope and adaptation of its columns, the choice of its topics, the bearing of its editorship, and the manner in which it treats them, is to the great variety of its contestants, and to the prominence it gives to practical, moral and religious questions, to literature, to education and forming, and to every theme of practical and educational interest, the equal of any Journal of New England. This time it has sought another field to become a field guide, companion and friend, wherever home or abroad.

Among the peculiar leading features of THE REPUBLICAN are, a full Summary of New-England News, arranged by State and County; the Weekly Correspondence of a high character from Boston, New-York and Washington; a weekly review and summary of all Religious Movements; original papers on Husbandry; summaries of new Ideas and Inventions in Science and Mechanics; a weekly article on Books; Authors and Artistic Men; a monthly column of Literary Notes; and a profusion of Prose and Poetry, with carefully selected miscellanies from the freshest books and magazines.

The editorial corps of THE REPUBLICAN numbers six individuals, including Dr. G. Holland, the popular "Timothy Ticonbe," and others.
